Special Education Success Holt Elementary School, Tuscaloosa County, AL

“The New Century program is a great tool for truly individualizing instruction. Since implementing New Century, I found that our Special Education students are now more engaged in the classroom. It also enhances the teacher’s ability to individualize instruction based on the reports that the program provides.

When I first saw the New Century program, I did not like it because I was not convinced that what would be taught on the computer would transfer to pen and paper. I am the first to admit that the program has proven me wrong.”

The New Century Learning System and ARMT Focused Instruction Programs

Rather than simply place students in the curriculum unilaterally at a general grade level, the New Century Learning System determines a student's specific strengths and weaknesses by instructional strand before work begins, and constructs an individual program accordingly. Diagnostic tests, conveniently administered and scored on-line, provide a profile of each student's abilities by semester grade level in each strand for each curriculum area. Based on this detailed analysis, the System automatically formulates a customized instructional program that will build on each student's strengths and address any weaknesses diagnosed.

New Century's ARMT Focused Instruction programs provide benchmark ARMT tests at each grade level (3 through 8). The programs automatically and seamlessly translate each student's test results into a unique instructional prescription. This comprehensive program of practice/diagnostic ARMT tests, graphic profiles, detailed objective-level analysis, focused individual lesson paths, and comparative gains profiles condenses preparation for the ARMT exams into a single integrated process that is easy for teachers to administer. The program is prescriptive at the tested objective level.
